DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION THROUGH 5G SERVICES

Neeraj Sinha, Naman Agarwal Siddhey G Shinde

India must rollout 5G services as a priority in order to enable digital transformation in Governance, Ease of living, and Ease of Doing Business. 5G, the newest generation of mobile communication technology, offers a diverse toolbox of features that can be used to solve business problems and social challenges in new ways, representing a new way of working and thinking.

Under a fully developed 5G ecosystem across the nation, it is estimated that around 30% of the end nodes will be usermobiles, whereas the remaining 70% will be nomadic or static Internet of Things (IoT) devices. More importantly, this also means that the network requirements for these two categories are very different. Fortunately, 5G also includes a feature called 'Network Slicing' that enables the same network to behave differently for different type of end nodes, and therefore to better serve the needs of each type. In recognition of this potential of 5G, India has decided to allow 'Private 5G networks'. These networks will typically be owned and operated by private entities to manage their systems and processes, as opposed to being used by consumers or user mobiles.

In particular, it is noteworthy that 5G's direct contribution to the Indian economy is estimated to be USD 450 billion over the next 15 years. 5G must be considered a platform to enable the digitalisation of society and physical industries and a catalyst to spur economic growth and social progress. As with most digital technologies, 5G also has numerous applications. Nevertheless, it is unlikely that all the applications will begin immediately after the 5G rollouts begin. Without doubt, the consumer mobile segment will be the first to be offered 5G network services. As popularly described, this is expected to bring much higher data speeds and lower latency. However, that does not even begin to scrape the tip of the 5G iceberg

The First Wave

The earliest applications of 5G will be in sectors with high digital technology maturity, called 5G-ready sectors, like Industry 4.0, Smart Cities, and FinTech. These are typically sectors that use wireless networks as an operational technology in their respective systems to improve efficiency and resilience. The incorporation of 5G will trigger another transformative leap forward, through pervasive digitisation, to also bring greater flexibility, scalability, and responsiveness in such systems. Moreover, 5G will also convergence of several enable technologies in these sectors, including Artificial Intelligence (AI) / Machine Learning (ML), Augmented Reality (AR), Additive Manufacturing, and Autonomous Robots and Drones.

The Industry 4.0 conceptualizes the rapid convergence of these technologies, industries, and societal patterns and processes in the 21st century due to increasing interconnectivity and smart automation. 5G will act as the gears of this system, enabling these technologies to operate with each other. A prime example is the manufacturing sector where every stage (of the manufacturing process) from supply management and inventory to quality control and distribution will be automated, with interconnected machines and systems. This will help optimize the end to end manufacturing process,

PURSUING ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE THROUGH ODL: PLETHORA OF AVENUES IN IGNOU

Dr. Vikas Singhal Dr. Nurul Hasan

here are many interconnected issues concerned with the environment and to understand them a holistic, scientific and sustainable environmental management strategy is the need of the hour. Indira Gandhi National Open University (IGNOU) is a big stakeholder and has launched many new programme(s)/ courses(s) in the field of Environment. IGNOU has played a vital role in expansion and widening of Higher education through open and distance learning mode in India during last 35 years. IGNOU is expanding the social base of ODL (Open and Distance Learning) education system in India at affordable cost. The learners are getting opportunities to learn basics of Environmental Science courses through ODL mode at their doorstep in many environmentpertinent programmes. Some of the programme details are enlisted in this article. By enrolling and completing them, a learner may acquire the skills and knowledge in the field of environment:

Academic Programme through ODL Mode:

Master of Science (Environmental Science) (MSCENV): Master of Science (Environmental Science) programme aims at generating skilled manpower to tackle the growing environmental and developmental challenges and changes arising from the transition to a sustainable society. This programme will give an insight into the socioeconomic causes and the characteristics of pollution and degradation of the natural environment, including the effects on human beings, the atmosphere, ecosystem and other organisms. The programme will provide learners with the necessary means to develop the capacity to carry out independent assessment on environmental issues. In addition, learners will be well equipped to analyze and assess environmental systems and problems; be able to propose sustainable solutions to environmental problems; and contribute to the development of policies improving output volumes and reducing process times. The same way, the operation and maintenance of these machines and systems will also be automated with drones and robots conducting inspections and automatically scheduling repair tasks. Safety systems will be equipped with a variety of sensors and will continuously monitor vital parameters of the manufacturing systems as well as the workers. This will significantly improve the safety of the workers, increase the life of the equipment, and reduce risk. However, the greatest value offering of 5G comes from the flexibility it offers. In the event of any unplanned interruption to any machine, the manufacturing process can be reconfigured immediately assisted by AI - to ensure the process is back up and running using the remaining available machines and equipment.

The modern day standard of a city is a Smart City, and it is characterized by application of digital technologies to improve the lives of its citizens. These cities will keep getting 'Smarter' as they incorporate more elements of 5G technology across different facets of their operations. In particular, as more vehicles and street furniture (light poles, traffic lights, etc.) are equipped with 5G nodes, the city will be able to monitor and optimise traffic flows in real time. This will significantly reduce the traffic woes in cities, reducing commute times and improving the quality of life. Similarly, 5G will also support large scale deployment of open and high speed WiFi networks and in public transport (buses and metros), public spaces (gardens and monuments), and large events. It will simultaneously collate video feeds from all such places - including traffic monitoring videos - and with the assistance of ML, it will be able to identify potential risks faster. This will enable the large groups of citizens to consume digital content without experiencing delays and enable law enforcement to act faster, improving their sense of security.

One of the most common soft indicators of development is the financial technology used by the citizens. Innovative technologies like UPI and RuPay are being exported with the world to help improve their financial systems. Add 5G to the mix, and India is poised to become a global leader. Coupling UPI with GIS tools (Geospatial Information Systems) on an ultra low latency 5G network will enable superfast, secure, and seamless payment experiences. This will bring about cashier-less stores and 'Pay As You Go' shopping models. Toll and entry tax systems had already been improved with FASTag technology. Now, integrating a GPS based systems over an ultra reliable 5G network will enable a completely 'stop-less' toll system. This will enable seamless entry and exit of toll roads while ensuring reduction of their illegal usage. The payments bank model has been widely successful in India, with high adoption even in rural and remote regions. Using a high reliability 5G network with AI based Virtual Banking Experience, the model can be transformed into a completelymobile based formal banking. This is the portion of the 5G iceberg that is above the water. However daunting these applications appear, it must be noted that 5G is a technology that is meant to include everyone. In order to contribute to the upcoming 5G wave, there are education and skill requirements at various levels. At the matriculation level, it is important to develop hands-on skills with IoT and 5G devices. Developing an understanding of their configuration and their operations and maintenance will also be critical to such roles. At the fresh graduate level, it is important to have an understanding of the principles of cellular communication and some programming skills. Fresh graduates with skills in programming IoT and 5G devices will be great assets. At the early career and postgraduate level, the importance shifts to deploying and managing networks and envisaging new applications. Strong foundational knowledge of communication technology coupled with the skills in network management and project management is imperative. However, the most important prerequisite is just the simple willingness to engage and experiment with the technology to find new applications.

The Second Wave

After the first wave of applications in the 5G-ready sectors, there will also be a wave of applications in sectors for social development like Health & Nutrition, Education, and Agriculture. Although the use of digital technologies in these sectors has been steadily increasing, it has primarily been in selective projects where such use cases are being demonstrated. Like in the early adopting sectors, 5G will bring greater scalability and flexibility to these applications. More importantly, it will also make these systems easier to use. which will improve adoption and, therefore, digital literacy of and yet it remains among the most challenging goals due to its intersection with poverty, education, and access to infrastructure. Here, 5G will act as a catalyst for transforming this sector. One example is a Connected Ambulance, where the 5G-enabled ambulance includes features like a realtime feed of the patient and the patient's vitals that can be transmitted to the hospital, and even semi-automated robotic surgical tools. Together, they enable a faster and better medical response, offering potentially life-saving benefits. Another example is the use of Point-of-Care Diagnostic devices enabled with 5G can improve greatly access to testing facilities. This will improve the quality of diagnosis and encourage patients to return and continue with formal and modern healthcare. Similarly, a hospital operating all the monitoring equipment and electronic health records on a private 5G network, can enable just a handful of doctors and nurses to effectively care for hundreds of patients. This will help reduce the pressure from the frontline healthcare workers and also improve the quality of care for the patients.

In a country where the youth form the largest portion of the population, education is a key tool for social and economic development. In the last 5 years alone, while India has seen a rapid increase in the adoption of digital platforms for education, the educational outcomes still leave room for improvement. Incorporating 5G into these systems will enable bridging this gap. There is already an effort to introduce multi-modal education through initiatives like PM eVIDYA. Using 5G, this high quality content can be delivered to every student in the country with real-time translation into the student's vernacular. Further, the use of 5G-enabled lab kits and interactive virtual labs for teaching science and mathematics can help make these subjects engaging for every student and help develop their critical thinking skills. In the same way, a Digital University will not only enable the nation's youth and women to access higher education in their vernacular and learn from interactive labs, but will also equip them with the necessary vocational skills to improve their employability.

primary source of income for the vast majority of rural India. However, the conventional agricultural practices are resource intensive, offer mediocre yields, and cause irreparable damage to the soil and the environment. The use of 5G enabled technologies offers an opportunity to make these agricultural practices more sustainable and superior in yield. Even with simple applications such as the deployment of soil sensors and irrigation systems, 5G-enabled systems will help drastically reduce water consumption. In regions with unstable water supply, solutions like this could help save the very livelihood of small farmers. Full-fledged precision agriculture systems enabled with 5G will create futuristic farms that employ autonomous robots and vehicles for crop monitoring and harvesting. These will significantly improve the land and labour productivity of agriculture in India, and will greatly help the safety of the people involved in agricultural labour. Similarly, systems for cleaning and processing agricultural produce will leverage 5G-enabled technologies. This will lead to an improvement in efficiency and speed, and can even reduce wastage.

As is evident, there are a myriad of social development applications of 5G, offering even greater potential for employment. The educational and skill requirements for such opportunities are similar to those in the 5G-ready sectors. At the matriculation level, it is important to gain skills in configuring and operating 5Genabled devices, such as Pointof-Care Diagnostic devices. Vocational courses in repair of electronic devices will also be very useful in this segment. For fresh graduates, in addition to principles of cellular communication and programming skills, it is also important to understand the sector of application, like understanding the challenges in agriculture. Skills in implementing small projects will greatly add value to one's profile here. At the early career and post graduate level, the skill requirement remains focused around being able to manage projects and envisage new applications. There is, notably, an increased emphasis on sectoral and technological awareness since these factors play a key role in development applications. At each level, it is important to be able to use these devices and systems for the intended purposes.

Employment Potential

The Digital India Programme launched in 2015 had outlined three visions, viz. 'Digital Infrastructure as a Core Utility to Every Citizen,' 'Governance and Services on Demand,' and 'Digital Empowerment Citizens'. Accordingly, National Digital Communications Policy, 2018 (NDCP 2018) envisaged embarking on three missions. Connect India, Propel India, and Secure India to realise the vision of a digitally empowered economy and society. 5G holds enormous potential and relevance in almost every sector, whether education, healthcare, FinTech, agriculture, transportation, or anything else. Each of these applications will generate employment opportunities that will enable economic growth of the community.

Around the end of 2021, the telecom sector (directly) employed less than 50 lakh professionals. However, the Telecom Sector Skill Council (TSSC) recognizes the potential of 5G, and estimates that India will need 2.2 crore skilled professionals by 2025. Corroborating this, the number of new jobs in the 5G value chain quadrupled between 2020 and 2021. This indicates that the vast majority of these jobs are likely to come up in the next few years. The TSSC offers comprehensive training and skilling courses for those interested in such roles.

The 5G spectrum auction is expected to be completed within the third quarter of 2022, and rollouts are expected to begin in fourth quarter of 2022 or latest by first quarter of 2023. This offers an ample window to begin developing the education and skill qualifications to work in the 5G value chain. The door to this opportunity has opened just a smidge, and now is the time to chase those skills.

'CHIPS TO STARTUP'

BUILDING STRONG ECOSYSTEM FOR SEMICONDUCTOR DESIGNING IN INDIA

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi recently inaugurated the Digital India Week 2022. The theme this time was 'Catalyzing New India's Techade'. During the programme, the Prime Minister launched multiple digital initiatives aimed at enhancing the accessibility of technology, streamlining service delivery to ensure ease of living and giving a boost to startups. One of these was the announcement of the first cohort of 30 institutions to be supported under the 'Chips to Startup' (C2S) Programme.

What is 'Chips to Startup' Programme?

To position India as a global hub for Electronics System Design and Manufacturing (ESDM) and to reduce the import of electronics product and to promote the domestic manufacturing and export in the entire value-chain of ESDM, the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology came out with National Policy on Electronics, 2019 (NPE-2019). One of the main objectives of NPE-2019 is to strengthen and leverage the existing manufacturing, research, design and development hubs for promoting design and innovation in the field of electronics by working closely with Government, industry, academia, universities and other institutions of learning to design programme ensuring availability of adequate skilled manpower to the industry. Thus, while enabling an environment for the industry to compete globally, NPE-2019 also encourages domestic development of core components, including chipsets.

Working on the policy's mandate, the Government has come up with the Chips to Startup or the C2S Programme that aims to train specialized manpower in the area of design of semiconductor chips at bachelors, masters and research levels, and act as a catalyst for the growth of startups involved in semiconductor design in the country. It offers to mentor at the organisational level and makes available state-of-the-art facilities for design to the institutions.

What are the objectives of C2S?

The programme aims to train 85,000 high-quality and qualified engineers in the area of verylarge-scale integration (VLSI) and Embedded System Design. With the help of this training, the government intends to usher in the development of 175 ASICs (Application Specific Integrated Circuits), working prototypes of 20 System on Chips (SoC) and IP Core repository over a period of five years.

The main objectives of the Chips to Startup Programme (C2S) are:

- a. Generating industry-ready manpower in System/SoC Design area for creating a vibrant fabless chip design ecosystem in the country;
- b. Promoting industry-led R&D, translational research and strengthening industryacademia collaboration;
- Leapfrogging in ESDM space by way of inculcating

the culture of developing reusable IP Cores and developing ASIC/SoC/ Systems for societal/strategic sectors;

- d. Broadening the base of ASIC /IC design in the country by accommodating more academic institutions, start-ups for design of IPs/ASICs/Systems/SoCs;
- Protection of Intellectual Property generated;
- To inculcate the culture of entrepreneurship among students and researchers way of incubating by startups.

Further, the umbrella Programme "Chips to Startup (C2S)" aims to inculcate the culture of entrepreneurship in related areas by way of facilitating translational research in collaboration with industry/ start-ups, etc. In the process, chip design will be democratized in line with the vision of the

C2S Programme, the access to leading EDA tools and design solutions from Synopsys, Siemens-EDA, Cadence Design Systems and Silvaco will enable students and researchers to use Industry Grade semiconductor chip design flows and methodologies thereby generating specialized manpower for establishment with a specific set of EDA tools and the Fab PDK, Fab compliance validation of designs, packaging of chips, testing, characterization in the country in centralized manner.

VLSI and Embedded system design training, research and electronics systems development across the country, it is proposed to set up a Skilled Manpower Advanced Research and Training (SMART) facility as a remote lab at NIELIT Calicut. The 'SMART' remote lab facility will be available 24x7 and the students, researchers, start-up industries can access the facility, anytime and anywhere.

Importance of phones, computers, mobiles, planes, solar cells, etc.

To make India a global hub for Electronic System Design and Manufacturing, the government of India has decided to set up a "complete ecosystem" for Semiconductors in the country that includes design, fabrication,

Core Repository, design flow

For proliferation of advanced

Semiconductors

Technology, as we know it today, would not be imaginable without semiconductors because they craft the existence of electronic devices and enhance the compactness and power of these devices while also diminishing their price. Semiconductors, also known as integrated circuits (ICs) or microchips are essential components of our day-to-day lives due to their integral role in the fabrication of electronics like medical instruments, military weapons, home and kitchen appliances, future. ISM is of paramount importance to organize efforts for promoting semiconductors and display industry in a more structured, focused, and comprehensive manner. It will formulate a comprehensive longterm strategy for developing semiconductors & display manufacturing facilities and semiconductor design eco-system in the country in consultation with Government ministries/ departments/agencies, industry, and academia. It will facilitate the adoption of trusted electronics through secure semiconductors and display supply chain, including raw materials. specialty chemicals, gases, and manufacturing equipment. It will enable a multi-fold growth of Indian semiconductor design industry by providing requisite support in the form of Electronic Design Automation (EDA) tools, foundry services and other suitable mechanisms for earlystage startups. It will also promote and facilitate indigenous Intellectual Property (IP) generation and encourage, enable and incentivize Transfer of Technologies (ToT). ISM will also enable collaborations and partnership programs with and international national agencies, industries and institutions for catalyzing collaborative research, commercialization and skill development. #### NEW DELHI

The Union Government has banned single use plastic from July 1 this year. Single use plastic refers to plastic items that are used once and discarded. For example, plastic cups, straws, spoons, drinking water packages,

As an Indian citizen, I think the decision is commendable in many ways as it reduces the threat to the environment to a major extent whether it is in the form of terrestrial or marine plastic pollution.

But there is another aspect of the problem. The government should also devise mechanism so that plastics can be replaced as it is difficult for poor vendors to directly shift to cloth bags. Government incentives and support is necessary.

Positive effects of ban on single use plastic on environment -

- It will help in eliminating the microplastics which are very harmful to human beings, animals well as
- As per reports it has been projected that single use plastics could account for 5 to 10 percent of greenhouse gas emissions by 2050.

There are various practices which we can adopt to minimize the use of plastic -

- Make use of bags made of cotton or jute while shopping.
- The biodegradable and non-biodegradable wastes should be collected separately and disposed of
- It is better to recycle plastic waste. As most of the thermoplastics can be recycled very easily thereby reducing the threat of plastics to some extent.
- Use 5R principle reduce, reuse, recycle, recover, refuse as much as possible.
- Instead of using plastic containers for domestic use, you one can use steel or metal containers for storing food materials.
